PRESS RELEASE

ROYAL VISIT AT SCANGRIP

SCANGRIP had the honour of welcoming Her Majesty Queen Margrethe in connection with The Queen's visit to Svendborg. Over the last 10 years, SCANGRIP has undergone a transformation from tool manufacturer to Europe's leading manufacturer and supplier of innovative and future orientated high-tech LED work lights.

On September 6, 2018, The Queen was taken on a journey through the history of SCANGRIP and the development of its innovative LED work light solutions. It is Anders Borring, who with his innovative approach and passion for light in a flexible and adaptive organisation of dedicated employees, is the driving force behind the SCANGRIP success.

“It was a great honour to show Her Majesty around the company, presenting who we are and how we design and develop powerful work lights for the professional market. We are proud of The Queen's visit, where we had the opportunity to talk about LED technology and the opportunities it gives us. It encourages us to keep pushing back the boundaries of LED lighting and battery technology, creating new and specialized work light solutions”, says Anders Borring, CEO and Owner of SCANGRIP.

During The Queen's visit, SCANGRIP had the honor of handing over a tailored kit of SCANGRIP work lights designed with special LED features applicable for The Queen's artistic work.

Today, SCANGRIP stands as Europe's leading and most innovative manufacturer and supplier of LED work lights to the professional market. 90 % of the turnover is generated from export to more than 75 countries, with Germany being by far the largest export market. SCANGRIP designs and develops own products and receives strong recognition in the market for its innovative, attractive and thorough product design of very high quality. All production takes place at own factories in Svendborg as well as Shanghai and Ninghai, China. Today the company employs a staff of around 500: 50 in Svendborg, 200 in Shanghai and 250 in Ninghai.
